

2 PARTIES WILL PICK 269 ADAMS COMMITTEEMEN

Acting in the capacity of the County Board of Elections, the Adams county commissioners, S. Luther Baltzley, Marvin H. Benner and Edgar C. McDannell, issued today the annual Primary election proclamation.

The notice, drawn in accordance with the law, names May 17 as Primary election day, and announces that voting will be conducted between the hours of 7 a. m. and 8 p. m. on that day.

Listing the parties which may make nominations on that day, the notice states that the Democratic, Republican and Royal Oak parties are entitled to separate ballots on the state-wide voting. Each of those parties may nominate one candidate for United States Senator, one for Governor, one for Lieutenant Governor, one for Secretary of Internal Affairs, one Representative in Congress from the 22nd district and one Representative in the General Assembly.

Each party also will elect one member to represent the county on the respective state committees. Both parties will name district committeemen although the number to be chosen by each political group varies.

To Elect County Committeemen

The Republicans elect three members of their party, men or women, from each of the 42 districts of the county, a total of 126 committee members.

The Democrats of Adams county will elect 143 committeemen and women. There are at least two committee members from each district. Some districts will name more than two members of the county committee and the number for each is determined by the vote cast by each district in the last gubernatorial election. For each 50 votes over the first 100, there shall be one additional committee member. Where there are more than two committee posts, they shall be distributed to two men and one woman and where the number increases above three the same ratio shall be continued between the sexes. This year 112 men and 31 women will be chosen.

The Republicans elect a county chairman and a vice chairman, while Democrats will choose their party head at a convention of committee members to be held after the primaries, probably in June.

The proclamation further reminds candidates that the last day for filing petitions is March 28.

50-Cent Filing Fee

To date several scores of prospective committeemen and women have paid the 50-cent filing fee to have their papers filed at the county commissioners' office so that their names will appear on the party ballots in May.

No candidates for county chairman or vice chairman have yet filed their papers.

The number of committee members to be named by the Democrats in each of the 42 voting districts of the county follows:

DISCUSS PLANS FOR CHANGE IN SCHOOL SET-UP

Members of the board of directors of the Union Independent school district met Friday evening in the court house with the Adams county board of school directors for the purpose of advancing preparations for the merging of the only no-teacher school district in Adams county—Union Independent.

The five members of the county board attended and these directors from Union Independent district: Cornelius Lawrence, John L. Staub, George A. Martin and Henry C. Moore. A vacancy on that board, caused by the resignation of one director, has not been filled.

The group studied together the provisions of Act 157 which makes the merger mandatory by July 1 of this year and then began preparation of a petition asking approval of merger plans which will be presented to the state council of education and later to the Adams county court.

No announcement was made of the district which will be recommended as that with which the independent school district has been merged. The state Department of Public Instruction has suggested that the board of the no-teacher district which is to be merged make a recommendation for the district with which it is to be joined.

The board of the district to which the independent district may be added will be called into conference on the matter, if suggestions from Harrisburg are followed.

The act under which the merger is being brought about provides that each school director of the district which is discontinued shall automatically become a member of the board of school directors within the district to which the territory in which he resides has been annexed and he shall continue to serve as a director in the merged district until the expiration of his term.

The lands, equipment and any other property belonging to the no-teacher districts shall become the property of the district to which the merging district is added.

The petition on the merger is expected to be before the court by May 15.

GETS LIFE FOR TAXI MURDER

Philip J. Dunlap, colored, 26-year-old confessed slayer of Harold Devine, taxicab driver and native of McSherrystown, Friday was denied his request for "the rope" and sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

He was found guilty of first-degree murder by Judges J. Abner Styler, Duke Bond and Rowland K. Adams who sat in the Criminal court in Baltimore after the state of Maryland had announced its intention of asking the death penalty.

Through his attorney, Linwood G. Koger, Dunlap pleaded guilty to the killing a month ago in the 600 block North Vincent street, Baltimore. He said he wanted to be given the full penalty, "that is the rope."

Dunlap told the court that several hours before the shooting he went to a party where he had several drinks of whisky. He carried a pistol with him, he said, because he feared one of those attending the affair would attack him.

Afterward, it was added, he returned to his home in the 2300 block North Stockton street, Baltimore, got a soldering iron and with the pistol still in his pocket walked to the 2000 block Pennsylvania avenue where he hailed a taxicab.

Testimony showed no apparent reason why Dunlap hailed the cab. He said he didn't know.

Dunlap admitted attacking Devine. He said he hit the driver several times in the head with the soldering iron, but denied having tried to rob him.

Questioned about the bullet wound in Devine's head, the Negro said he remembered that his pistol had been fired, but he did not know he had shot anyone.

Dunlap was apprehended in a laundry after the affair.

Devine died the next day in a hospital. He was 27 years old.

Young fryers were offered at several of the 28 stands that were occupied this morning and brought 40 cents a pound, while year-old dressed fowl continued at 35 cents a pound. Dressed ducks also brought 35 cents a pound, with squabs at 20 cents a piece.

Eggs continued at 20 cents a dozen. Staple winter fruits and vegetables were offered at unchanged prices.

Pork and its products were plentiful, with beef being offered at one stall. Chuck roasts sold for 18 cents a pound. Round steak was 25 cents a pound and sirloin 30 cents.

JOHN MARSH IS BACK IN LOCK-UP

Pursuing an "in-and-out" existence between home and jail, John Marsh, Gardner R. D., went back to his familiar cell in the Cumberland county prison in Carlisle Friday night, rather than send his son Eugene, 8, to school, vaccinated.

He started his 118th day of imprisonment since November, after a brief, routine hearing such as he has had many times in the past before Justice of the Peace William Dosh. He pleaded not guilty to a charge of violating the school attendance laws, and was convicted and sentenced summarily to five days' imprisonment.

Although Eugene had missed many days from school that have not been charged against his father, the 40-year-old mountaineer was accused in Friday's proceedings with keeping his boy out of school only one day.

Until recently, Marsh came up before the justice periodically, was charged with one violation for each day of Eugene's absence from school, and was sentenced for the corresponding number of five-day terms—one for each day of absence.

Supervising Principal W. G. Rice, of the South Middleton Township schools, explained that only one day's absence was mentioned in Friday's proceedings because, while authorities believed the former "chain sentences" were perfectly legal, they wanted to be on the safe side in views of appeals.

Marsh has been freed for brief intervals several times in the past few weeks, pending appeals that were rejected. The latest still pending, is with the Federal court.

TWO HOSTETTER COWS LEAD TEST OF 180 ANIMALS

Exceptionally high butterfat production records have been set this month by two animals in the herd of Irvin Hostetter, Littlestown R. D. Both cows produced more than 70 pounds of butterfat to lead the 180 animals under test in the Adams County Cow Testing association this month.

One cow, a Holstein and Jersey mixture, gave 72.5 pounds of fat and 1,367 pounds of milk, while the other high-producing Hostetter animal, a grade Holstein, gave 71.1 pounds of butterfat while producing 1,974 pounds of milk.

The monthly report of John F. Yocum, Alexandria, Pa., tester for the county association, shows that 11 herds were under test. Of the 180 cows under test, 36 gave in excess of 40 pounds of butterfat, and 14 of that group topped the 50-pound mark in fat production.

Forty-six cows produced a half ton of milk or more and 26 of them exceeded 1,200 pounds.

The herd of George Motter, Littlestown R. D., carried off top group honors in butterfat production with a herd average of 39.99 pounds per cow. Motter has 19 cows in the herd.

LITHUANIANS BOW TO POLISH TRADE DEMANDS

(By The Associated Press.)
While Europe's war fever took a turn for the better today—with little Lithuania bowing to an impressive show of Polish arms—a crisis was generated in Mexico by expropriation of 17 American and British oil companies.

President Lazaro Cardenas, vigorously giving effect to a constitution which envisions wholly Mexican control of Mexican natural resources, resorted to expropriation of a $40,000,000 industry to end a two-year conflict between 18,000 petroleum workers and foreign capital.

The Central Bank of Mexico suspended dealing in foreign currency and Cardenas indicated devaluation of the peso was under consideration.

Lithuania apparently averted invasion by yielding to Poland's demands for "normalization" of trade and diplomatic relations—the latter non-existent for 17 years.

Submission came several hours in advance of the expiration of an ultimatum backed by Polish infantry, artillery, cavalry, tanks and planes on the border facing Kaunas, the Lithuanian capital.

Adolf Hitler, in a speech Friday, before the Reichstag was dissolved to include representation from German Austria, asked for four more years of power "to complete the task ahead in the greater Reich."

Diplomatic sources at Praha, Czechoslovakia, said Hitler had demanded renunciation of Czechoslovakia's military alliance with Russia as the price of peace.

Russia and France recently reaffirmed their promises to protect Czechoslovakia.

France again sought renewal of British-French efforts to halt Spanish insurgent aerial attacks on Barcelona. Paris presented London with a documented list of 442 German and Italian planes in the insurgent air force.

After a week and a half offensive to knife through Government Spain to the eastern coast, insurgent armies were consolidating newly won positions southeast of Caspe and Alcaniz for a new lunge toward the Mediterranean some 40 miles away.

The week of the war in China brought Japanese pressure close upon Suchow, vital junction of the Lunghai and Tientsin-Pukow railways.

MEXICO SEIZES U. S., BRITISH OIL PROPERTIES

Mexico City, March 19 (AP)—President Lazaro Cardenas expropriated American and British oil properties valued at more than $400,000,000 today in a bold stroke designed to end a two-year conflict between labor and foreign capital.

Simultaneously, the Central Bank of Mexico suspended dealings in foreign currency and the president indicated devaluation of the peso was under official consideration.

An extraordinary session of the chamber of deputies was called for 11 a. m. (moon E. S. T.) today to vote additional budget appropriations to tide the government over the crisis.

Operations were suspended in the oil industry at one minute after midnight Friday night as union oil workers, going ahead with a threatened "folded arms strike," forced a shutdown.

It was believed, however, that union headquarters would order the syndicate's 18,000 members back to work promptly in an effort to help Cardenas while he tussles with the admittedly difficult situation.

A bulletin from the press bureau early today said the Mexican cabinet had decided upon "means to prevent damage to the financial action of the petroleum industry by activities of the country."

These included provisional operation of the department of national economy and the general petroleum administration.

Another step was representations by the government to all labor unions urging them to refrain from strikes and public manifestations.

Cardenas, broadcasting an explanation of his act, said the foreign oil companies had carried on a "sordid and skullduggery campaign" against the government, which "has had the result that these same companies sought to injure seriously the economic interests of the nation, attempting by this means to nullify the legal dispositions dictated by the Mexican authorities."

The drastic move was described by the president as essential for the "economic liberation" of Mexico.

The companies, he charged, had defied the courts of the land in refusing to accept an arbitral verdict of the federal labor board handed down December 18, increasing their labor costs by approximately $7,200,000 yearly and giving the workers other benefits.

In flatly refusing to pay the increased wages, the companies contended the increases were "confiscatory" and so high as to force suspension of operations if imposed.

The Bank of Mexico's "suspension of operations in gold, dollars and foreign exchange," to be resumed "as soon as it (the bank) judges opportune," was interpreted by a bank official as presaging depreciation of the currency.

The companies' refusal to accept the arbitral verdict, Cardenas said, would destroy—if left unchallenged—"the social norms that regulate the equilibrium of all the inhabitants of Mexico."

There was no announcement as to how much indemnity the companies would be paid for their expropriated property. Under Mexican law, such indemnification must be made within ten years.

MEXICO SEIZES U. S., BRITISH OIL PROPERTIES

Mexico City, March 19 (AP)—President Lazaro Cardenas expropriated American and British oil properties valued at more than $400,000,000 today in a bold stroke designed to end a two-year conflict between labor and foreign capital.

Simultaneously, the Central Bank of Mexico suspended dealings in foreign currency and the president indicated devaluation of the peso was under official consideration.

An extraordinary session of the chamber of deputies was called for 11 a. m. (noon E. S. T.) today to vote additional budget appropriations to tide the government over the crisis.

Operations were suspended in the oil industry at one minute after midnight Friday night as union oil workers, going ahead with a threatened "folded arms strike," forced a shutdown.

It was believed, however, that union headquarters would order the syndicate's 18,000 members back to work promptly in an effort to help Cardenas while he tussles with the admittedly difficult situation.

A bulletin from the press bureau early today said the Mexican cabinet had decided upon "means to prevent damage to the financial action of the petroleum industry by activities of the country."

These included provisional operation of the department of national economy and the general petroleum administration.

Another step was representations by the government to all labor unions urging them to refrain from strikes and public manifestations.

Cardenas, broadcasting an explanation of his act, said the foreign oil companies had carried on a "sordid and skillful campaign" against the government, which "has had the result that these same companies sought—to injure seriously the economic interests of the nation, attempting by this means to nullify the legal dispositions dictated by the Mexican authorities."

The drastic move was described by the president as essential for the "economic liberation" of Mexico.

The companies, he charged, had defied the courts of the land in refusing to accept an arbitral verdict of the federal labor board handed down December 18, increasing their labor costs by approximately $7,200,000 yearly and giving the workers other benefits.

In flatly refusing to pay the increased wages, the companies contended the increases were "confiscatory" and so high as to force suspension of operations if imposed.

The Bank of Mexico's "suspension of operations in gold, dollars and foreign exchange," to be resumed "as soon as it (the bank) judges opportune," was interpreted by a bank official as presaging depreciation of the currency.

The companies' refusal to accept the arbitral verdict, Cardenas said, would destroy—if left unchallenged—"the social norms that regulate the equilibrium of all the inhabitants of Mexico."

There was no announcement as to how much indemnity the companies would be paid for their expropriated property. Under Mexican law, such indemnification must be made within ten years.

TRAYNOR PINS PENNANT HOPES ON 2 HURLERS

San Bernardino, Calif., March 19 (AP)—Manager Harold J. (Pie) Traynor of the Pittsburgh Pirates, believes the Giants, Cubs, Pirates and Cardinals, who finished in that order in 1937, will fight it out again this year for the National League championship.

Traynor, confident he can smooth his infield and outfield talent into clicking combinations, plays most ardently of all that his pitching staff won't fall apart in midseason, as it did in the thick of things last summer.

The easy going Traynor thinks the two Waners, Paul and Lloyd, will be as good as ever in the outer garden, and that the Bucs' young $25,000 rookie, Johnny Rizzo, will provide a new punch in left field. He hit .358 for Columbus last year.

Gus Suhr has first sewed up. Ditto to Pep Young at second. Arky Vaughn should be able to continue at short. But Bill Brubaker has a tussle afoot to keep third from Lee Handley.

Al Todd, who batted .307 last year, and Raymond Berres, late of Louisville, will do the catching.

Traynor pins most of his faith on Pitchers Russ Bauers and Jim Tobin, both of whom blossomed into winning pitchers late last season. Bauers won 13 and lost six, and Tobin won six and lost three.

The rest of the Pirate pitchers fared badly, but Traynor has faith they will come back. Cy Blanton was the only regular who hurled 10 full games, finishing with 14 wins and 12 defeats.

Bill Swift ended with nine wins and 10 losses. Red Lucas was up at one time with eight wins and two defeats—and won no more, but lost a total of 10.

Marvin Webster Duke, who won 21 and lost eight for Montreal, may bolster the staff. Ken Heintzelman, up from Buffalo, and Bob Klinger from Sacramento, may come through.

Or a white cloud sailing by

I've a curious obsession
And from it I'm never free,
I'm in absolute possession
Of the countless things I see.
Friendly smile and twinkling eye:
Tree in bloom or climbing vine;
If I see them passing by
For that moment they are mine.
Fields of flowers and mountain ranges,
Vessels nosing out to sea
And the sunset's golden changes;
One and all belong to me.
Does a bird before me rise
Singing melodies divine?
I have but to lift my eyes
And the joy of it is mine.

RIVALS BUILD ANOTHER RAFT FOR RIVER TRIP

Lock Haven, Pa., March 19 (AP)—The 112-foot raft lumbering men who are floating down the Susquehanna in a revival of Pennsylvania's old timber industry overcame one of the biggest obstacles on its journey to Harrisburg today.

The raft slid over a five-foot falls, dipped its nose momentarily into the spray and without the slightest hesitation coasted along.

The prospect of a five-foot drop over a sheer-faced dam failed today to daunt hardy raftsmen aboard what may turn out to be the "next-to-the-last" raft as they shoved off on another 28-mile leg of their 200-mile voyage down the Susquehanna river.

Even as elderly descendants of old-time raftsmen steered a course over the newly-built Lock Haven dam on their way to Williamsport, eight young men began assembling hemlock logs at Dysart in an effort to claim for that once-busy Cambria county lumbering town the honor of launching the Susquehanna's "last raft."

The Cambria county boys, led by Clark Peterson, plan to float their timbers down the stream to Irvonia in Clearfield county, where they will be made into the raft.

Tonkin and his men built their 112-foot raft in the headwaters of the Susquehanna's west branch, west of Clearfield.

Peterson and his friends cut their "sticks" on the estate of Peterson's father, the late R. E. Peterson, who played a prominent part in the once-booming lumber trade of Cambria and Clearfield counties.

In the Lock Haven dam, built last summer, there is no sluice such as eases the way at others on the route to Harrisburg. Its "sticks" fed into a portable sawmill.

There is a 10½ foot "flood" however, and R. A. Tonkin of Tyrone, the sponsor, and his crew of five expressed confidence they could take it in their stride. The 50-foot bow sweep was lashed back, however, so that it wouldn't be broken when the raft dived over the dam.

Fire sirens shrilled and thousands flocked to town to see the craft pull in Friday.

YOUNG OFFENDERS

New York, March 19 (AP)—The crying of 100 babies in the Brooklyn infants home upset Ignatz Bologna, a next door neighbor, so he couldn't sleep. So he went to court—charging the children, all under six years of age, with disorderly conduct. Magistrate Jacob Elperin dismissed the case and contributed $10 to the home.

ROOSEVELT MAY DEMAND HEAD OF T. V. A. RESIGN

Washington, March 19 (AP)—Informed persons expressed the opinion today that President Roosevelt would ask T. V. A. Chairman A. E. Morgan to resign if he refuses to cooperate in a presidential inquiry into his quarrel with his fellow directors.

Plainly exasperated, after a second, futile session Friday with the three directors, Mr. Roosevelt gave Morgan 72 hours—until 1:30 p. m. (E. S. T.) Monday—to make up his mind whether he would answer questions at a broadened presidential investigation at which he would have opportunity to call witnesses.

The President indicated he thought the situation demanded some decisive action.

"On the evidence which has been presented and on the refusal to submit evidence on the part of Chairman Morgan, some action must be taken in the public interest," he said.

Morgan again had refused to give Mr. Roosevelt any facts to support his charges against the other T. V. A. directors, David Lilienthal and H. A. Morgan.

These charges include accusations of "bad faith" and "official misconduct."

Chairman Morgan told the President: "It is not possible in sessions of this sort to go deeply and thoroughly enough into the facts pertinent to the issues to get the truth with respect to these matters."

His stand resulted in the President charging him with "contumacy"—disregard of authority. Mr. Roosevelt also declared that "on the face of the record as it stands today the charges of the other directors that Chairman Morgan has obstructed and sabotaged the work of the Tennessee Valley authority must be accepted as true."

While the President could request the chairman's resignation there was doubt that he could force it. The T. V. A. act vests in Congress the power to remove directors. Morgan declined to disclose what course he would pursue.

Sundown Story

A NEAR QUARREL

WILLY NILLY had opened the door for the bears and out they had walked, ready for their first spring stroll.

They were looking forward to the fresh spring goodies they would find, the soft breezes, the delicious smells they would scent.
And they knew that in a short time they would be husky once more.

"I'm sorry that we couldn't have 3-4

entertained you better." Willy Nilly now said to his guests. "You see we were so excited at seeing our bears once again. We haven't seen them since the fall."

"You certainly heard them—almost before they had growled," said the chimpanzee. "I suppose it is because your ears stick out that you can hear sounds so quickly.
They reach you sooner than they would some one who had ears further back."

"Are you making rude remarks about Willy Nilly's ears?" shrieked Christopher Columbus Crow.
"Let's give him a good beating," barked Rip.

"The idea of talking like that about our Willy Nilly," barked Sweet Face.

"We'll show you," cackled Top Notch and all the Puddle Mud-dler started for the chimpanzee.

"Wait, wait," cried the chimpanzee. "I did not mean to be rude. I meant to compliment him. I have large ears. I am not offended if any one says so."

"Large ears, large ears," cried the Puddle Muddlers. The chimpanzee grinned.

"You can take it," admitted Christopher. "I don't believe you mean any harm."

Willy Nilly sighed with relief.
There had almost been a quarrel,
but now all was jolly.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

ONE INCREASING PURPOSE

TO me at least, one of the most inspiring lives of modern times is that of the late Madame Curie. A wonderfully fascinating life story has been recently published of this remarkable woman. Written by her second daughter, Eve. People who think that they never had a chance should read this book.

In the Fall of 1891, it was that a young Polish girl came to Paris to study. Her name was Mary Sklodowska—a name so strange and difficult to pronounce or remember that she was merely referred to as the foreigner "with an impossible name" and who was "always in the front row at the physics courses."

But this quiet and earnest young woman had one increasing purpose—to benefit mankind by new discoveries in science.

After years of the bitterest of struggles and privations, as well as discouragements, she and the poor, yet brilliant man whom she later married, announced to the world the discovery of radium. The life story of these noble people is unmatched anywhere.

I once attended a banquet given by Henry Ford in honor of Thomas Edison's fiftieth anniversary of the invention of the electric light. President Hoover sat behind the guest of honor and many other distinguished people, but to the right of the main speakers, near to the end of the table sat a woman whose kindly and understanding face seemed to me to be one of the most remarkable I had ever seen. Greatness hovered about that face like a halo. It was Madame Curie, to my notion one of the greatest women who ever lived.

Madame Curie had but one increasing purpose up to the very day she died—to keep discovering, to keep learning more about the secret forces, hidden from man's mind. Her laboratory was her world. It meant more to her than all the honors and acclaim that fell at her feet.

There was one tragic thing about her life, however. People paid little attention to her until she had astounded the world! Then the wealth and honors looked empty indeed to her. But that one increasing purpose never wavered up to the very moment she joined the immortals.

Boxwood Barrier

By Blanche Smith Ferguson

The Story So Far: Reuben

Oliver, self-made millionaire, is held to his farm in Maryland's hunting district by Judith Goodloe, a girl who doesn't even recognize his existence. Red-headed Cissy Rogers comes to dig him out, but cannot persuade Reuben to fight for his evaporating fortune. Meanwhile, tea is being served at Goodloe's Choice, and woo to the climber penetrating the boxwood hedge. Judith's heart is singing. Gary is home!

Chapter Five
Sweet Enchantment

Judith's desire to speak of the absent one was too strong to be downed. "Have you seen him?"
"No, I was sure I'd find him here," said Dick Blout.

Judith examined the heel of her scuffed riding boot. "Gary seldom rushes anywhere."

"Since when?" A smile chased over Dick's fat face. "Unless my memory fails, he never goes anywhere at a sane or safe pace, and unless my ears are deceiving me,
I hear this minute someone approaching at fireman's speed."

His teasing eyes met Judith's honest ones that had not learned to wear a mask. His smile vanished. So! That was how it was!
Little Judy, grown up and—in love. He sighed for his own lost youth.

"How old are you, Judy?"
"Twenty."
"Feeling feeble?"
"Not exactly."
"Then why don't you run to meet Gary?"

But she did not run to meet Gary. True, her spirit was cata-pulted somewhere in breathless, dizzying space but the physical Judith remained lazily calm in her basket chair while her heart ticked out:

"In another minute—I'll know—They'll all be watching like cats at a mouse hole—I mustn't give myself away—but I'll know—if he doesn't care—I can't bear it!"

Gary's arrival was spectacular.
He came dashing up the drive, on his splendid sorrel—bare-headed, broad shouldered, gloriously sure of his seat.

"Hail! Cheerio! Adsum!" The
croak he waved might have been a conqueror's sword.

At his claxon call the little group under the trees stirred in unison, as a wheatfield is stirred by a breeze. Languor fell from it.
Everyone except Amanda arose to greet the newcomer.

He came on, waving, not drawing rein until he was a scant three inches from the bowing, smiling Amos. Then flinging himself from the saddle, he crossed the little strip of grass at a bound and, for all the world to see, swept Judith into his embrace.

"Judy—bless my soul, I'm glad to see you!"

Recklessly he bent his handsome head and kissed her squarely upon her curving, red lips. "Are you glad to see me, Judy?"

"Too Long"

Had Judith been less glad to see him she might have found fault with the flavor of that kiss it was so frankly joyous, so completely a part of Gary's exuberance but caught in a great wave of ineffably sweet emotion, Judith was not critical.

"When," breathlessly, "did you come?"

"Hour ago. Couldn't wait to see you."

"It's been—a long time."

"Too long."

For the flash of a second they might have been alone in a newly created world, each discovering the miracle of the other. Garden, watching eyes, were for the time being non-existent.

"You're gorgeous, Judy!" The sure brightness of his smile.

Her fluttered femininity.

The shining moment passed.
Gary's arms around Judith loosened.
He went forward and, with a graceful foreign gesture, kissed the thin hand of the old woman in the peacock chair.

"Glad to see me, Gran?" It was typical of Gary to wait everyone to rejoice openly at his coming.

"You're sure of it, you scamp!"
She had not wholly approved of his enthusiastic greeting of her granddaughter. "In my day," she reflected, "a man could kiss a girl without taking the whole world into his confidence. Now, nothing is sacred enough to keep secret."

But she smiled up into the good-looking young face above her and admitted that his mouth was beautiful enough to make any girl's heart turn over.

"You're looking swell, Gran."
"I'll believe you because I want to, Gary."

Out of the whole world he was the mate she would have chosen for Judith. His shoulders were flat and straight beneath his English riding coat. His eyes were clear, with a sil-ful come-hither in them. Goodlooks and Brents had been friends through generations.

"Something To Tell You"
The others pressed forward.
Lo, Gary! How's the merry-go-round?"

"On the up and up. It's grand to see you again!"

"Been pining for us?"
"Believe it or not!"
Handshakes that were handshakes.

Kisses light as thistledown and meaningless as yesterday's wind flowers.

"Sit down," Amanda commanded. "Pull your chairs into the shade.
Everyone."

"We thought you'd be here for the Hunt Cup Race, Gary."

"I read of it with tears in my eyes!" At this moment Gary believed that, "London papers said it was the best ever."

"A nice race," Dick Blout admitted grudgingly. "Captain Kettle did it again."

"Any spills?"
"One slight. Just enough to make it typical."

Amanda sat up very straight.
"How could it be a typical race with not a Maryland horse in it?" she asked accusingly.

A slight cloud settled on all their faces, an uneasiness that was almost guilt. Gary turned to Judith: "You hadn't an entry?"

"Nothing good enough."

If the admission hurt her, it was said and wormwood to Amanda. She said: "We have a fair colt growing up."

Gary radiated confidence. "Next year I'll bring the cup home to you, Gran."

Remembering that he was Master of Hounds, Mr. Blout clapped his plump hands vigorously and called the chatters to attention, but not before Gary found time to whisper to Judith.

"Let's cut this as soon as we can.
I have something to tell you."

Something to tell her! And his kiss still warm upon her lips! She need not have been afraid.

She nodded an almost imperceptible assent. Out of the world of girls he had come back to her.
Haden's she always known he would?
Not even to herself would she admit that she had been uncertain.

It was too humiliating.

Backgrounds of Adams County

By B. F. MACPHERSON

No. 32—Just Rambling

AS usual, this column will be a scrap heap composed of facts regarding our county history. There are so many things we would like to write about, that it is almost impossible to choose, but we will do our best.

We have been told that our own village of Fairfield (once known as Millerstown), is rich in historical lore. One thing puzzles us. At one time, or so we have been told, a church in the town now used as a garage, had in the rear of the edifice a most interesting old churchyard. Gradually the congregation died out, and not so many years ago the building itself was sold to an individual who converted it into a garage. To gain more space, the stones in the graveyard were taken out and—here is what we would like to know—where were those stones placed? In the newspaper files we read time after time of people being buried at Millerstown (Fairfield).
The graves of these people are not to be found in any of the existing cemeteries. What church was this and where are the stones that once marked the graves in its churchyard?
Can you help us?

While in Hamiltonian township,
we would like to write of a family graveyard located in this part of the county. Did any of you ever hear of a Snyder family? All of the members of this family except one died of smallpox during the early years of the Civil war. According to legend, the members of this family were southern sympathizers and openly ridiculed President Lincoln. Then suddenly one of the family was taken ill, and it was soon apparent that the victim suffered from smallpox.
He was removed hastily to a vacant tenant house, located on the farm, and died there after a short interval. In the dead of the night the body was placed in a hastily built coffin and by the light of a lantern buried in a corner of a field. One by one the family contracted the dreaded disease, died, and were buried in the same fashion as the first victim. Finally only the youngest daughter remained alive, and by some miracle or other she escaped the blight. Afterwards, stones were erected over the hastily made graves, and here this tragic "acre of God"
can be found today, a cluster of eight graves in the corner of a field!

SEVERAL weeks ago a friend of ours, who knows our weakness for graveyards, told us of a small burial plot to be found near Biglerville. We searched, but were unable to find the site. Perhaps you can help us. Here is her description of the route: In Biglerville, turn right at the traffic light. Go through the town, and turn on the first road to the left.
Back this road a short distance you will find a small family cemetery.
Can you tell us the name of this place of burial?

Recently we visited another old graveyard—this time one located in Mt. Joy township—namely, Pine Bank cemetery. We hardly know how to begin a description of this plot; it might be well to start by correcting an often repeated bit of misinformation concerning a man buried here. We refer to Hugh Den-widie, Jr., who "departed this life September 25, 1829, aged 63 years."

The Hugh Denwidie buried in Pine Bank cemetery was a son of the Lieutenant Colonel Hugh Denwidie, of Revolutionary fame, who died while in the service of his country at Philadelphia. Lieutenant Colonel Denwidie was buried in a churchyard located in the city, no one knows just where, but it is certain that the body was not returned to his native county.

Did you ever hear the story told regarding the beginning of this cemetery? If you didn't, we will tell you the tale. In one corner of this plot you will find a small stone containing thereon the following inscription:

"Here lies ye body of Adam Livingston
who departed this life
November 9th; 1748.
Aged 4 years."

Now, the child Adam Livingston was the first person buried on this site. According to the story friends and relatives were taking the body of the little boy to the Greater Cenewago cemetery for burial. They had come from some rather distant point in York county, and when they came to Rock creek they found it impossible to cross due to high water.
So they buried the body on the rise of a slight hill, and gradually with the passing of the years other people were buried there—and today it is known as Pine Bank cemetery. Another version of this tale tells us that the snow was too deep for the party to proceed further so they buried the body at the first presentable spot and returned home. Evidently they returned to the site, for as we have said the grave is well and plainly marked.

There will be more about Pine Bank cemetery next week.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

TO me at least, one of the most inspiring lives of modern times is that of the late Madame Curie. A wonderfully fascinating life story has been recently published of this remarkable woman. Written by her second daughter, Eve. People who think that they never had a chance should read this book.

In the Fall of 1891, it was that a young Polish girl came to Paris to study. Her name was Mary Sklodowska—a name so strange and difficult to pronounce or remember that she was merely referred to as the foreigner "with an impossible name" and who was "always in the front row at the physics courses."

But this quiet and earnest young woman had one increasing purpose—to benefit mankind by new discoveries in science.

After years of the bitterest of struggles and privations, as well as discouragements, she and the poor, yet brilliant man whom she later married, announced to the world the discovery of radium. The life story of these noble people is unmatched anywhere.

I once attended a banquet given by Henry Ford in honor of Thomas Edison's fiftieth anniversary of the invention of the electric light. President Hoover sat behind the guest of honor and many other distinguished people, but to the right of the main speakers, near to the end of the table sat a woman whose kindly and understanding face seemed to me to be one of the most remarkable I had ever seen. Greatness hovered about that face like a halo. It was Madame Curie, to my notion one of the greatest women who ever lived.

Madame Curie had but one increasing purpose up to the very day she died—to keep discovering, to keep learning more about the secret forces, hidden from man's mind. Her laboratory was her world. It meant more to her than all the honors and acclaim that fell at her feet.

There was one tragic thing about her life, however. People paid little attention to her until she had astounded the world! Then the wealth and honors looked empty indeed to her. But that one increasing purpose never wavered up to the very moment she joined the immortals.

Boxwood Barrier

By Blanche Smith Ferguson

The Story So Far: Reuben

Oliver, self-made millionaire, is held to his farm in Maryland's hunting district by Judith Goodloe, a girl who doesn't even recognize his existence. Red-headed Cissy Rogers comes to dig him out, but cannot persuade Reuben to fight for his evaporating fortune. Meanwhile, tea is being served at Goodloe's Choice, and woe to the climber penetrating the boxwood hedge. Judith's heart is singing. Gary is home!

Chapter Five

Sweet Enchantment

Judith's desire to speak of the absent one was too strong to be downed. "Have you seen him?" "No, I was sure I'd find him here," said Dick Blout.

Judith examined the heel of her scuffed riding boot. "Gary seldom rushes anywhere."

"Since when?" A smile chased over Dick's fat face. "Unless my memory fails, he never goes anywhere at a sane or safe pace, and unless my ears are deceiving me, I hear this minute someone approaching at fireman's speed."

His teasing eyes met Judith's honest ones that had not learned to wear a mask. His smile vanished. So! That was how it was! Little Judy, grown up and in love. He sighed for his own lost youth.

"How old are you, Judy?" "Twenty."

"Feeling feeble?" "Not exactly."

"Then why don't you run to meet Gary?"

But she did not run to meet Gary. True, her spirit was catapulted somewhere in breathless, dizzying space but the physical Judith remained lazily calm in her basket chair while her heart ticked out:

"In another minute—I'll know—they'll all be watching like cats at a mouse hole—I mustn't give myself away—but I'll know—if he doesn't care—I can't bear it!"

Gary's arrival was spectacular. He came dashing up the drive, on his splendid sorrel—bare-headed, broad shouldered, gloriously sure of his seat.

"Hail! Cheerio! Adsum!" The crop he waved might have been a conqueror's sword.

At his clarion call the little group under the trees stirred in unison, as a wheatfield is stirred by a breeze. Languor fell from it. Everyone except Amanda arose to greet the newcomer.

He came off, waving, not drawing rein until he was a scant three inches from the bowing, smiling Amos. Then flinging himself from the saddle, he crossed the little strip of grass at a bound and, for all the world to see, swept Judith into his embrace.

"Judy—bless my soul, I'm glad to see you!"

Recklessly he bent his handsome head and kissed her squarely upon her curving, red lips. "Are you glad to see me, Judy?"

"Too long!"

Had Judith been less glad to see him she might have found fault with the flavor of that kiss it was so frankly joyous, so completely a part of Gary's exuberance but caught in a great wave of ineffably sweet emotion, Judith was not critical.

"When?" breathlessly. "did you come?"

"Hour ago. Couldn't wait to see you."

"It's been—a long time."

"Too long."

For the flash of a second they might have been alone in a newly created world, each discovering the miracle of the other. Garden, watching eyes, were for the time being non-existent.

"You're gorgeous, Judy!" The sure brightness of his smile.

"And you!" The almost fearful uncertainty of hers.

"I had forgotten how lovely—" His masculine arrogance.

"I've remembered—everything,"

Her fluttered femininity.

The shining moment passed. Gary's arms around Judith loosened. He went forward and with a graceful foreign gesture, kissed the thin hand of the old woman in the pea-cock chair.

"Glad to see me, Gran?" It was typical of Gary to want everyone to rejoice openly at his coming.

"You're sure of it, you scamp!" She had not wholly approved of his enthusiastic greeting of her granddaughter. "In my day," she reflected, "A man could kiss a girl without taking the whole world into his confidence. Now, nothing is sacred enough to keep secret."

But she smiled up into the good looking young face above her and admitted that his mouth was beautiful enough to make any girl's heart turn over.

"You're looking swell, Gran."

"I'll believe you because I want to, Gary."

Out of the whole world he was the mate she would have chosen for Judith. His shoulders were flat and straight beneath his English riding coat. His eyes were clear, with a sifful come-hither in them. Goodloes and Bents had been friends through generations.

"Something To Tell You"

The others pressed forward. Lo, Gary! How's the merry-go-round?"

"On the up and up. It's grand to see you again!"

"Been pining for us?"

"Believe it or not!"

Handshakes that were handshakes. Kisses light as thistledown and meaningless as yesterday's wind flowers.

"Sit down," Amanda commanded. "Pull your chairs into the shade, everyone."

"We thought you'd be here for the Hunt Cup Race, Gary."

"I read of it with tears in my eyes!" At this moment Gary believed that "London papers said it was the best ever."

"A nice race," Dick Blout admitted grudgingly. "Captain Kettle did it again."

"Any spills?"

"One slight. Just enough to make it typical."

Amanda sat up very straight. "How could it be a typical race with not a Maryland horse in it?" she asked accusingly.

A slight cloud settled on all their faces, an uneasiness that was almost guilt. Gary turned to Judith; "You hadn't an entry?"

"Nothing good enough."

If the admission hurt her, it was gall and wormwood to Amanda. She said: "We have a fair colt growing up."

Gary radiated confidence. "Next year I'll bring the cup home to you, Gran."

Remembering that he was Master of Hounds, Mr. Blout clapped his plump hands vigorously and called the chatters to attention, but not before Gary found time to whisper to Judith.

"Let's cut this as soon as we can. I have something to tell you."

Something to tell her! And his kiss still warm upon her lips! She need not have been afraid.

She nodded an almost imperceptible assent. Out of the world of girls he had come back to her. Hadn't she always known he would? Not even to herself would she admit that she had been uncertain.

It was too humiliating.

Backgrounds of Adams County

By B. F. MACPHERSON

No. 32—Just Rambling

AS usual, this column will be a scrap heap composed of facts regarding our county history. There are so many things we would like to write about, that it is almost impossible to choose, but we will do our best.

We have been told that our own village of Fairfield (once known as Millerstown), is rich in historical lore. One thing puzzles us. At one time, or so we have been told, a church in the town now used as a garage, had in the rear of the edifice a most interesting old churchyard. Gradually the congregation died out, and not so many years ago the building itself was sold to an individual who converted it into a garage. To gain more space, the stones in the graveyard were taken out—and here is what we would like to know—where were those stones placed? In the newspaper files we read time after time of people being buried at Millerstown (Fairfield). The graves of these people are not to be found in any of the existing cemeteries. What church was this and where are the stones that once marked the graves in its churchyard? Can you help us?

While in Hamilton township, we would like to write of a family graveyard located in this part of the county. Did any of you ever hear of a Snyder family? All of the members of this family except one died of smallpox during the early years of the Civil war. According to legend, the members of this family were southern sympathizers and openly ridiculed President Lincoln. Then suddenly one of the family was taken ill, and it was soon apparent that the victim suffered from smallpox. He was removed hastily to a vacant tenant house, located on the farm, and died there after a short interval. In the dead of the night the body was placed in a hastily built coffin and by the light of a lantern buried in a corner of a field. One by one the family contracted the dreaded disease, died, and were buried in the same fashion as the first victim. Finally only the youngest daughter remained alive, and by some miracle or other she escaped the blight. Afterwards, stones were erected over the hastily made graves, and here this tragic "acre of God" can be found today, a cluster of eight graves in the corner of a field!

SEVERAL weeks ago a friend of ours, who knows our weakness for graveyards, told us of a small burial plot to be found near Biglerville. We searched, but were unable to find the site. Perhaps you can help us. Here is her description of the route: In Biglerville, turn right at the traffic light. Go through the town, and turn on the first road to the left. Back this road a short distance you will find a small family cemetery. Can you tell us the name of this place of burial?

Recently we visited another old graveyard—this time one located in Mt. Joy township—namely, Pine Bank cemetery. We hardly knew how to begin a description of this plot; it might be well to start by correcting an often repeated bit of misinformation concerning a man buried here. We refer to Hugh Denwiddie, Jr., who "departed this life September 25, 1829, aged 63 years." The Hugh Denwiddie buried in Pine Bank cemetery was a son of the Lieutenant Colonel Hugh Denwiddie, of Revolutionary fame, who died while in the service of his country at Philadelphia.

Lieutenant Colonel Denwiddie was buried in a churchyard located in the city, no one knows just where, but it is certain that the body was not returned to his native county.

Did you ever hear the story told regarding the beginning of this cemetery? If you didn't, we will tell you the tale. In one corner of this plot you will find a small stone containing thereon the following inscription:

"Here lyes ye body of Adam Livingston who departed this life November 9th; 1748. Aged 4 years."

Now, the child Adam Livingston was the first person buried on this site. According to the story friends and relatives were taking the body of the little boy to the Greater Conewago cemetery for burial. So they buried the body on the rise of a slight hill, and gradually with the passing of the years other people were buried there—and today it is known as Pine Bank cemetery. Another version of this tale tells us that the snow was too deep for the party to proceed further so they buried the body at the first presentable spot and returned home. Evidently they returned to the site, for as we have said the grave is well and plainly marked.

There will be more about Pine Bank cemetery next week.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear father and mother, Daniel P. and Cevelia R. Reigle who died January 14, 1916 and March 19, 1917.

When we get home to the mansions above,
With the loved ones gone over before,
O, who can tell what a joy that will be,
There to live and rejoice evermore.

Angels will praise, the Redeemer will smile,
And loved ones we'll clasp by the hand,
Free from all pain far beyond earthly strain,
We shall dwell in that beautiful land.

By their daughters,
ANNIE AND IDA.

BASHORE TO SET 'PAY DAY' FOR IDLE WORKERS

Philadelphia, March 19 (AP)—A regular "pay day" for jobless workers in Pennsylvania drawing unemployment compensation was promised today by Ralph M. Bashore, secretary of Labor and Industry.

Taking cognizance of complaints concerning delay in receipt of checks, Bashore announced that within a few weeks it would be possible "for claimants to expect a check on a certain day of the week."

AMUSEMENTS: HERE AND THERE

THEY he-man-ized Robert Taylor today in a laboratory of flying fists.

Four heavyweights, hired by M-G-M to look like masters of mayhem, knocked the flower of Nebraska manhood from pillar to post in the rip-roaringest brawl of recent cinema history.

And Taylor liked it. He asked for more.

The slugfest was part of the drama of "Three Comrades" in which Taylor, Franchot Tone and Robert Young, as ex-soldiers, come home to Germany from the war—dead-broke, blue, but tough.

M-G-M hopes the role will accent Taylor's sock-appeal. At least it's different from the lacy ruffles of "Camille."

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" Walt Disney's successful animated cartoon, will continue on the Majestic screen next Monday and Tuesday.

Temple Personality
As "Rebecca," Shirley starts the picture with curls and cuteness unchanged. There is little to indicate that before long she will emerge—partly by virtue of a new coiffure—as a veritable "new Shirley Temple."

But she does, and it's amazing. By the time she sits down at the piano and starts her vocal reminiscing, our defenses were already weakened. Miss Temple many not be the greatest actress nor the greatest singer, but she has a way of stepping from that screen and putting her personality immediately into the hardest of hearts. And it's a very nice personality. Not forward, certainly not shy, but properly demure and at the same time twinkling, wise and winning.

The years have been kind to Shirley, and the indications are they will continue to be kind. She may be even that rarity among screen children—the one who won't be forced into retirement. "Shirley on the screen today is proof certain that success has not spoiled her—her better proof than Mrs. Temple's insistence. (Take a bow, Mrs. T.)"

A Different "Rebecca"
As for the picture, it isn't "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" as you may remember it but it's plenty bright and pleasant. In the film Rebecca is a talented child who goes to live at Sunnybrook Farm after failing to win a place on the air. And Sunnybrook Farm becomes a broadcasting center and the handsome agent—Randolph Scott—falls in love with Rebecca's cousin—Gloria Stuart—and all in all Kate Douglas Wiggin, who wrote the book, wouldn't recognize it. But what does that matter, anyway?

Phyllis Brooks, one of the newer blondes, climbs several steps higher in her role in this, and Scott, Miss Stuart, Helen Westley, Jack Haley, Slim Summerville and William Demarest and Ruth Gillette all contribute effectively. Bill Robinson is there, tapping, although not enough. Little Mary McCarthy, as a terrible child singer, does her part well, and Franklin Pangborn, as the stand-by organist who never gets to play, has a hilarious bit. Allan Dwan's direction keeps the pace fast and next to Shirley—deserves credit for making "Rebecca" the pleasant thing it is.

For the week of March 28 these feature pictures will be seen at the Majestic:
Monday and Tuesday—"Sally, Irene and Mary," with Alice Faye, Tony Martin and Fred Allen.
Wednesday—"Of Human Hearts," with Walter Huston and James Stewart.
Thursday—"Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," with Phil Regan and Ann Dvorak.
Friday and Saturday—"Girl of the Golden West," with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

Passenger miles flown by American airlines are more than double the mileage flown in all Europe. Germany ranks second to the United States in air travel and the British Empire is third.

EDWARD G. ROBINSON
SENIOR AND JUNIOR

PAINTINGS, PILES, PNOCHIE, PUTTS, AND EVEN MOVIE PARTS, ARE OF LITTLE CONSEQUENCE TO THE STAR WHEN COMPARED WITH HIS SOLE SON AND HEIR, EDWARD G. ROBINSON, JR. THE AMAZING DR. CLITTERHOUSE

ONE headed and fifty meak, at midnight! Just a movie location order for night scenes, filmed on the Los Angeles river bottom, near Burbank for Warner Brothers, picture "The Invisible Menace," which stars Boris Karloff and Marie Wilson.

Part of the cast worked all day, and part all night but the same director, John Parrow, worked on both shifts getting a few hours of sleep between sunrise and 9 a. m. mornings, and a nap between 5 p. m. and 7 p. m.

The cast of their labors, will be seen at the Majestic theatre next Tuesday.

Little Lang, now directing Sally Blundy and George Raft in Paramount's "You and Me," is one of the most superstitious directors in the business. Has to know what every time he mentions a cuffed picture.

REARE and red, the mustache of grey-headed Sgt. James Dew of Tacoma, Wash., measures seven inches including curl. He's been on police force 25 years.

Hollywood
By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—Looks like the beginnings of a new rash of movies about the woes of vaudevillians. . . There's Shirley Temple in "Little Miss Broadway" and also "Goodbye Broadway" for starters. . . Later will be recognized as erstwhile Gleason opus, "The Shannons of Broadway." . . In tune with the times, troupers of the new version are identified as members of traveling units—playing picture show houses!

Highlight of the Warner club (studio self-help society) annual party was, as usual, the screened "blow-ups" of the preceding year: those comic hits in which the nice demure heroines and stalwart heroes are caught forgetting their lines. And refreshing in the long parade of "Damsels" and better was the little-girl apology of Bonita Granville, a little girl, who said, "Oh, I forgot I'm so sorry!"

Having Bad Time
Charles' Winner's stand-in is his brother Adolph, who is retired but likes to put on grease-paint. . . Once the Winners—there were five of them—each had a separate stock company. . . And one could take another's place without the audience's being the wiser.

By all reports they're not having a wonderful time with "Having Wonderful Time," screen rights to which cost plenty. . . One reason may be fact that Jewish characters of play were changed for movie purposes to straight, non-dialect talkers. . . Which should give about the same results as parlor-patterns who preface a dialect joke with, "This would be funny if I could tell it in dialect!"

Change Of Music
The "Three Comrades" are Robert Taylor, Robert Young and Franchot Tone. . . In the picture only Tone will wear the close cropped haircut originally planned short trims for all three, and Tone was first in the barber shop. . . When plans were changed suddenly (idea being to make locale of story indefinite, not Germany) it was too late to save Tone, but Young and Taylor escaped the clippers.

Cutter at Universal is supposed to be son of late John Bunny, rotund early film comic—but he won't talk about it. . .

Hollywood—Pete came from the Galapagos islands to Hollywood and the more abundant life.

Pete has earned it, his manager will tell you. The manager, Ralph T. Luford, has earned it, too. Or did you ever train a penguin?

Pete recently celebrated his third birthday as a personage unique in Hollywood, perhaps in the world. At least Luford knows of no other trained penguin anywhere, and certainly of no other in pictures.

Luford is as striking an individual as Pete. He—Luford, not Pete—wears a fringe of old-fashioned beard, stretching from ear to ear by way of his chin, and on his head is a visored sailor's cap, bearing the inscription, "Penguin Pete." He arrives at the studio each day with Pete on one arm, and a large thermajug, labeled "Pete's Dinner-pail" on the other.

Penguin Diet
In the jug are morsels upon which Pete, a stern diet, insists. He likes only frozen fish, and eats only the filets. Luford obliges, as part of his minute attentions to Pete's health. The life expectancy of the average captive penguin, he says, is from six to 14 months. But with the sort of care Luford gives him, Pete should live from six to 20 years.

When Pete works before the cameras—and "Little Miss Broadway" with Shirley Temple marks his sixth camera appearance—he gets $100 a day. Between pictures he luxuriates in his penthouse palace—eight feet above his private swimming pool—at Hermosa Beach. It was in Hermosa Beach that Luford, formerly a sailor but then a florist and pet-dealer, used to have Pete pull a little cart advertising his store—and it was there that Slim Summerville saw Pete and advised a Hollywood career. Pete has appeared in "The Big Shot," "Stand-In," "The Goldwyn Follies" and Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back."

Heavily Insured
Because of Pete's unique value, Luford has the bird insured for $5,000. Lloyds of London insisted that Pete's footprints be recorded as a prerequisite to issuing the policy. No other penguin demise will collect. The studio also has Pete insured for $50,000.

Hollywood—Unreal parade:
There's at least one movie company convinced that spelling is important. . . It had a set filled with extras and painted signs. . . One of the signs read "Arctic Circle" and they shot for three days before some literate gentleman happened along to change it to "Arctic." . . They had to re-shoot, at a cost of $50,000!

If Paulette Goddard plays Scarlett O'Hara, Selznick's search for an "unknown" will end about the way most such quests end. . . Paulette is an obscure little girl who has been kept skillfully in the public eye about four years, her only major film appearance the lead in an obscure little picture called "Modern Times" with some unknown comedian whose name I can't remember—although there've been reports that she married him. . . However, Selznick did pick an unknown for "Tom Sawyer," which evens the score. . . Some wear monocles through choice—Director Fritz Lang is one—but others have monocles forced on them. . . Claude Allister came to Hollywood in '29, at the start of sound, and couldn't get into a studio. . . "If you're an Englishman, where's your monocle?" officials demanded. . . So Allister bought a special model, with little rounded edges to keep it from slipping—and hasn't been out of work since. . . He wears it currently in "Kentucky Moonshine."

On the same musical set was concrete evidence that Marjorie Weaver has "arrived." . . David Butler, directing, called her from her dressing room for a scene. . . "Just a minute until I fix my lip line," she responded. . . Quick as that, three make-up experts descended on her, with alarums and excursions. . . She didn't have a chance to lift a lipstick. . . And one maker-upper was delegated to stand by at all times.

Flat-Foot's "Stand-In"
Stop the presses: Priscilla Lane is fond of wild flowers.

Paul Hurst's feet in "No Time to Marry" are not his own. . . Hurst plays a cop, but his feet are not flat and his arches are unbroken. . . The movies are not tradition-upsetters. . . When they needed a close-up of the policeman's feet, they hired a flat-footed extra to "foot double."

Hollywood—Unreal parade: Ray Bolger, the rubber-legged dancing comedian, is becoming a cutting-room star. . . He's out of "The Girl of the Golden West" since the sneak preview because they figured his dance stopped the story. . . He was almost omitted from "Rosalie," too. . . But there's a boy who's going to click big when he gets the part—if the part stays in.

Mary Astor tells about the curious but probably natural reaction of a movie-bred child to her first glimpse of a stage performance. . . She took daughter Marylyn to see the Ballet Russe. . . The little girl exclaimed excitedly as the first curtain rose "Oh, Mamma—they look like real people!"

Improves Quickly
Arlene Whelan, a few years ago a beauty-shop girl and manicurist, all but had the role of Scarlett O'Hara but Selznick would not give it unless Zanuck sold her contract, which Zanuck wouldn't. Arlene's first picture is "Kidnapped"—and she's been improving so much that they're re-shooting the earlier sequences so her work will match her later dramatic stride.

Al Werker, directing this number, is a rarity among directors. . . He does all kinds of films, taking on an "epic" like "The House of Rothschild," then turning to a lowly "B" and doing the same kind of job. . . Just does what he's given to do, whether it's super-super, or just colossal, or just a quickie.

W. S. Van Dyke is another. . . At least he's a little fed up on

AMUSEMENTS: HERE AND THERE

THEY he-man-ized Robert Taylor today in a laboratory of flying fists.

Four heavyweights, hired by M-G-M to look like masters of mayhem, knocked the flower of Nebraska manhood from pillar to post in the rip-roaring brawl of recent cinema history.

And Taylor liked it. He asked for more.

The slugfest was part of the drama of "Three Comrades" in which Taylor, Franchot Tone and Robert Young, as ex-soldiers, come home to Germany from the war—dead-broke, blue, but tough.

M-G-M hopes the role will accent Taylor's sock-appeal. At least it's different from the lacy ruffles of "Camille."

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" Walt Disney's successful animated cartoon, will continue on the Majestic screen next Monday and Tuesday.

Sweet Sixteen! And no other than Bette Davis taken when she was in finishing school at Miss Cushing's academy, in Massachusetts, little dreaming that some day she would be a movie star. She'll be seeing you—next in Warner's "Jezebel."

The picture depicting the history of transportation, "Wells Fargo," will return to Gettysburg at the Strand next Tuesday. The leading characters are Joel McCrea, Bob Burns and Frances Dee.

If the family coffers of the Howards had not been empty, causing John Howard to discontinue his college career, the former young English professor and Phi Beta Kappa key-holder might not have become an actor and would not be seen in one of the leading roles in Columbia's prison drama, "Penitentiary." It was after he had to leave school that young Howard went in seriously for acting, and became famous on stage and screen. Other important players in "Penitentiary," which comes to the Majestic theatre next Wednesday, are Walter Connolly, Jean Parker, Marc Lawrence and Robert Barrat.

FANCIES OF THE MOVIE FOLKS
PAINTINGS, FIRES, PINOCCHIO, PUTTS, AND EVEN MOVIE PARTS, ARE OF LITTLE CONSEQUENCE TO THE STAR, WHEN COMPARED WITH HIS SOLE SON AND HEIR, EDWARD G. ROBINSON—MARRY FOR SHORT—WHO AT SIX SHOWS MUCH OF HIS FATHER'S FACILITY IN PRETENDING HE'S SOMEBODY ELSE THAN HIMSELF. EDWARD G. ROBINSON WILL BE SEEN NEXT IN WARNER'S "THE AMAZING DR. CLITTERHOUSE."

ONE hundred and fifty meals at midnight! Just a movie location order for night scenes, filmed on the Los Angeles river bottom, near Burbank, for Warner Brothers' picture "The Invisible Menace," which stars Boris Karloff and Marie Wilson.

Part of the cast worked all day, and part all night but the same director, John Farrow, worked on both shifts—getting a few hours of sleep between sunrise and 9 a. m. mornings, and a nap between 5 p. m. and 7 p. m.

The result of their labors will be seen at the Majestic theatre next Thursday.

Fritz Lang, now directing Sylvia Sydney and George Raft in Paramount's "You and Me," is one of the most superstitious directors in the business. Has to knock wood every time he mounts a screen picture.

Hollywood

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—Looks like the beginnings of a new rash of movies about the woes of vaudevillians. . . . There's Shirley Temple in "Little Miss Broadway" and also "Goodbye Broadway" for starters. . . . Latter will be recognized as erstwhile Gleason opus. "The Shannons of Broadway." . . . In tune with the times, troupers of the new version are identified as members of traveling units—playing picture show houses!

Highlight of the Warner club (studio self-help society) annual party was, as usual, the screened "blow-ups" of the preceding year; those comic hits in which the nice demure heroines and stalwart heroes are caught forgetting their lines. And refreshing in the long parade of "Dams!" and better was the little-girl apology of Bonita Granville, a little girl, who said, "Oh, I forgot I'm so sorry!"

Charles' Winninger's stand-in is his brother Adolph, who is retired but likes to put on grease-paint. . . . Once the Winningers—there were five of them—each had a separate stock company. . . . And one could take another's place without the audience's being the wiser.

By all reports they're not having a wonderful time with "Having Wonderful Time," screen rights to which cost plenty. . . . One reason may be that Jewish characters of play were changed for movie purposes to straight, non-dialect talkers. . . . Which should give about the same results as parlor-patterns who preface a dialect joke with, "This would be funny if I could tell it in dialect!"

Change Of Music

The "Three Comrades" are Robert Taylor, Robert Young and Franchot Tone. . . . In the picture only Tone will wear the close cropped haircut accepted as German. . . . Studio originally planned short trims for all three, and Tone was first in the barber shop. . . . When plans were changed suddenly idea being to make locale of story indefinite, not Germany, it was too late to save Tone, but Young and Taylor escaped the clippers.

Cutter at Universal is supposed to be son of late John Bunny, rotund early film comic—but he won't talk about it. . . .

Hollywood—Pete came from the Galapagos islands to Hollywood and the more abundant life.

Pete has earned it, his manager will tell you. The manager, Ralph T. Luford, has earned it, too. Or did you ever train a penguin?

Pete recently celebrated his third birthday as a personage unique in Hollywood, perhaps in the world. At least Luford knows of no other trained penguin anywhere, and certainly of no other in pictures.

Luford is as striking an individual as Pete. He—Luford, not Pete—wears a fringe of old-fashioned beard, stretching from ear to ear by way of his chin, and on his head is a visored sailor's cap bearing the inscription, "Penguin Pete." He arrives at the studio each day with Pete on one arm, and a large thermojug, labeled "Pete's Dinner-pail" on the other.

Penguin Diet

In the job for morsels upon which Pete, a stern dieter, insists. He likes only frozen fish, and eats only the filets. Luford obliges, as part of his minute attentions to Pete's health. The life expectancy of the average captive penguin, he says, is from six to 14 months. But with the sort of care Luford gives him, Pete should live from six to 20 years.

When Pete works before the cameras—and "Little Miss Broadway" with Shirley Temple marks his sixth camera appearance—he gets $100 a day. Between pictures he luxuriates in his penthouse palace—eight feet above his private swimming pool—at Hermosa Beach. It was in Hermosa Beach that Luford, formerly a sailor but then a florist and pet-dealer, used to have Pete pull a little cart advertising his store—and it was there that Slim Summerville saw Pete and advised a Hollywood career. Pete has appeared in "The Big Shot," "Stand-In," "The Goldwin Follies" and Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back.

Heavily Insured

Because of Pete's unique value, Luford has the bird insured for $5,000. Lloyds of London insisted that Pete's footprints be recorded as a prerequisite to issuing the policy. No other penguinly demise will collect. The studio also has Pete insured, for $50,000.

Hollywood—Unreel parade: There's at least one movie company convinced that spelling is important. . . . It had a set filled with extras and painted signs. . . . One of the signs read "Artie Circle" and they shot for three days before some literate gentleman happened along to change it to "Arctic." . . . They had to re-shoot, at a cost of $50,000!

If Paulette Goddard plays Scarlett O'Hara, Selznick's search for an "unknown" will end about the way most such quests end. . . . Paulette is an obscure little girl who has been kept skillfully in the public eye about four years, her only major film appearance the lead in an obscure little picture called "Modern Times" with some unknown comedian whose name I can't remember—although there've been reports that she married him. . . . However, Selznick did pick an unknown for "Tom Sawyer," which evens the score.

Some wear monacles through choice—Director Fritz Lang is one—but others have monacles forced on them. . . . Claude Allister came to Hollywood in '29, at the start of sound, and couldn't get into a studio. . . . "If you're an Englishman, where's your monacle?" officials demanded. . . . So Allister bought a special model, with little roughened edges to keep it from slipping—and hasn't been out of work since. . . . He wears it currently in "Kentucky Moonshine."

On the same musical set was concrete evidence that Marjorie Weaver has "arrived." . . . David Butler, directing, called her from her dressing room for a scene. . . . "Just a minute until I fix my lip line," she responded. . . . Quick as that, three make-up experts descended on her, with alarums and excursions. . . . She didn't have a chance to lift a lipstick. . . . And one make-upper was delegated to stand by at all times.

Flat-Foot's "Stand-In" Stop the presses: Priscilla Lane is fond of wild flowers.

Paul Hurst's feet in "No Time to Marry" are not his own. . . . Hurst plays a cop, but his feet are not flat and his arches are unbroke. . . . The movies are not tradition-setters. . . . When they needed a close-up of the policeman's feet, they hired a flat-footed extra to "root double."

Hollywood—Unreel parade: Ray Bolger, the rubber-legged dancing comedian, is becoming a cutting-room star. . . . He's out of "The Girl of the Golden West" since the sneak preview because they figured his dance stopped the story. . . . He was almost omitted from "Rosalie," too. . . . But there's a boy who's going to click big when he gets the part—if the part stays in. . . . Mary Astor tells about the curious but probably natural reaction of a movie-bred child to her first glimpse of a stage performance. . . . She took daughter Marilyn to see the Ballet Russe. . . . The little girl exclaimed excitedly as the first curtain rose "Oh, Mamma—they look like real people!"

Improves Quickly

Arleen Whelan, a few years ago a beauty-shop girl and manicurist, all but had the role of Scarlett O'Hara but Selznick would not give it unless Zanuck sold her contract, which Zanuck wouldn't. Arleen's first picture is "Kidnapped"—and she's been improving so much that they're re-shooting the earlier sequences so her work will match her later dramatic stride.

Al Werker, directing this number, is a rarity among directors. . . . He does all kinds of films, taking on an "epic" like "The House of Rothschild," then turning to a lowly "B" and doing the same kind of job. . . . Just does what he's given to do, whether it's super-super, or just colossal, or just a quip.

W. S. Van Dyke is another. . . . At least he's a little fed up on

"epics" at present, what with "Marie Antoinette." . . . "Epics," said he, "are just a lot of grief. . . . Meaning, he said, the wigs and the costumes. . . . With so many wigs, and so much elaborate apparel, there's constant repair work to hold things up. . . . And being held up is not one of the colonel's pleasures.
